QF Conflict Minerals Policy

The Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform Act, signed into law in July 2010, imposes the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) reporting requirements on publicly traded companies whose product(s) may contain metals derived from minerals defined as “Conflict Minerals”. These minerals include: tantalum, tin, tungsten, gold (3T & G) and their derivatives which may be mined in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) and/or the surrounding countries.

Allied Electric Motor Service Inc. is a commercial, off-the-shelf, distributor and as such, does not design, manufacture, or control the content of the products they distribute. Being many supply chain layers removed from the mining and processing of raw materials, the company has neither firsthand knowledge of the source, nor do they knowingly obtain and/or supply any component or product that contains conflict minerals.

Allied Electric Motor Service Inc. believes that the legal responsibility and obligation to identify the source and chemical/mineral makeup of any product lies with the component’s manufacturer. Our Executive Management feels that by completing customer spreadsheets, documents, web links, customer surveys or any other document/form attesting to the possible inclusion and source of conflict minerals create legal liabilities that we cannot accept. We are unwilling to be held accountable for possible incorrect or misleading information provided by others. Therefore, upon customer request, we will provide specific part number(s) and contract information in order for our customers to directly contact the manufacturer.

As due diligence we will encourage our suppliers and their supply chains to source materials and products that are free from conflict minerals. We will expect our suppliers to:

- Perform due diligence with their supply chain in identifying and eliminating sources of conflict minerals in their product(s).
- Disclose appropriate conflict mineral information to our customer upon request.
- Provide unsolicited notification of any product that contains raw material originating in the Democratic Republic of Congo and surrounding ‘conflict’ countries when known.
